- What is your primary message?
- What do you want recipients to do??
- Which lists or segments need to know about this?
- What facts or data points support this message?
- Who should “send” this email?

1. What is your primary message?

Example: LastPass

- Users aren't affected by the Under Armour data breach
- Questions about password security
- Types of information leaked (plus defining what a hashed password is)

LastPass...

At LastPass, we're committed to your security. We wanted to provide our LastPass community with the most up-to-date information on the Under Armour data breach to help you protect your personal information. This breach does not affect your LastPass account.

On Thursday, Under Armour Inc. announced that 150 million accounts from its subsidiary, MyFitnessPal, were compromised. The breach included user names, email addresses, and hashed passwords. (Hashing is a mathematical function that converts an original string of data into a seemingly random string of characters.) Driver's license numbers and payment cards were not compromised. Under Armour has created a Frequently Asked Questions page to help consumers understand what happened.

To further protect yourself from future incidents, you should:

1. Use a unique password for each online account.
2. Consider passphrases for even stronger passwords.
3. Enable two-factor authentication for added security.
4. Be mindful of potential phishing attacks.
5. Continue using a password manager, like LastPass, to help protect your identity.

3. What lists or segments need to know about this?

Example: Alaska Airlines

- Anyone who currently has travel credits in their account
- Extending expiration dates
- “Flexibility and space to make the best decisions”

The screenshot shows an email from Alaska Airlines. The header features the Alaska logo and a dark blue background. Below the logo, it says "Hello, Matthew | Mileage Plan Member | Sign in". The main body of the email has a white background and contains the following text:

Peace of mind for future travel planning

Dear Matthew,

As we continue to navigate this new and ever-changing landscape, it's hard to know what the future holds when it comes to travel plans. Right now, we want to make sure you have the flexibility and space to make the best decisions for you and your family. Here are some important updates when it comes to future travel:

Use your travel credits longer.

Many of you have travel credits or eWallet funds in your account, but aren't ready yet to make future plans, so we are extending expiration dates.

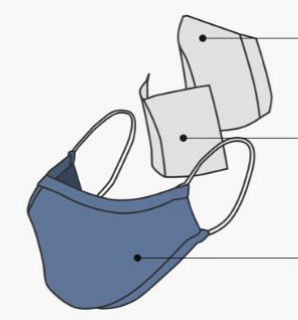

- If you have a valid credit in your eWallet that was deposited before March 1, 2020, your booking expiration date will be extended by 6 months. You do not need to travel before that 6-month extension date – you just need to book your ticket by then.
- For those who canceled or will cancel their flights due to COVID-19 impacts in March, April or May, the credits in your eWallet will be extended through July 5, 2021 for travel through May 31, 2022.

4. What facts or data points support this message?

Example: Madewell

- Non-medical grade face masks
- Materials used to craft the mask
- “Made to wear in places where social distancing can be tricky”

- From the founder herself (Christina)
- “I hope you consider sending a bouquet.”
